field of non-destructive evaluation of the quality of agro-food products is extremely important. Today, measuring the quantity and quality of agricultural products without any injuries has a special position in post-harvesting and processing of agricultural products. In this regard, various non-destructive methods have been developed to detect internal properties of crops which many of them ...

Several non-destructive evaluation techniques provide for a rapid, whole field or wide-angle view of composite structures to locate potential impact damage. These techniques include various types of thermography, electronic speckle pattern interferometry, and laser shearography. There are also nondestructive evaluation techniques that are slower and have a smaller field of view but have a ...
